

Sam Morton Writes Again . . . Sam's Latest and Quite Possibly, His Greatest!

A Timmerman Parent for the past nine years, Sam Morton also has been a professional wrestler, deputy sheriff, media relations guru, and freelance writer. However, he says that his greatest accomplishment is his two children, Alexey (8th grade) and Nikki (5th grade). They have kept Sam very busy being "DADDY" to these uniquely talented individuals. Somehow, Sam has still managed to find time to pen three excellent novels: Disavowed (2006), Betrayed (2009) and Ten Weeks Til . . . (2011).

Yes, Sam has done it again! Ten Weeks Til . . . debuted at the 2011 South Carolina Book Festival this past May. A.J. Hartley (What Time Devours) said, "Sam Morton is a writer to watch!" Pat Conroy, best-selling author of The Prince of Tides, Beach Music, and The Great Santini, said, "In Betrayed, Sam weaves a tale of laughter, passion, and fury!" These are absolutely great comments coming from fellow authors, who have had multiple entries on the New York Times bestsellers list themselves.

In addition to debuting his new novel at the South Carolina Book Festival, Sam also participated on two discussion panels: Fantastic Fiction! Werewolves, Vampires, and Blood! and Thrillers & Mysteries II. Being selected to appear on these panels and present his views on these two exciting genres, again reinforces the rising literary prestige our Timmerman Parent has achieved. Write on, Sam!